

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

—The typographical error which put "fool-selling" for "pool-selling" was not so far wrong as a matter of fact.

—The literary man who has written only one book generally spends the rest of his life talking about it.—Somerville Journal.

—He—"Will you marry me?" She (coolly)—"No; nor I won't be a sister, either. You're too young." He—"Will you be a grandmother to me, then?"—Epoch.

—The vegetarian who will not eat meat doesn't object to wearing leather shoes. Tender-heartedness seems to be something more than skin deep.—Fuck.

—It is easy to tell any one else how to get along. Men who write how to become healthy, wealthy and wise never saw a well day, never had a cent, and don't know a little bit.—Jamestown Journal.

—There are almost as many office-seekers as there are amateur photographers in the United States, but the office-seekers can't take a negative like the photographers do.—Washington Critic.

—Mrs. Muggins (reading)—"Every man gets the wife that heaven intended for him." Mr. Muggins (musingly)—"It must be true, then, that men are punished in this world for their sins."—N. Y. Weekly.

—Drug clerks ought to have good salaries. The man who hurts his conscience 1,000 times a day by saying: "We do not keep it; but we have a preparation put up by ourselves that is better," should be well paid.—N. O. Picayune.

—Do you know Smifkins? "Yes," replied the young woman to whom the question was addressed. "I have met him." "He claims to look down on society." "Does he? Well, I've observed that society does as much for him."—Merchant Traveler.

—She—"Of course the feminine half of humanity is the smarter. If not, how do you account for the fact that at the age when a man is still a gawky boy the woman has reached her self-possession and intellectual maturity?" He—"I don't know, unless it is because she hasn't so far to go."—Terre Haute Express.

—"Augustus," said Mrs. Henpeck severely, "I see a woman down in New Jersey has been convicted of being a common scold. I should like to see any brute of a man try that on me!" "But you are no common scold, Maria," responded Mr. Henpeck, with a sigh. And Mrs. Henpeck is still wondering what he meant.—Life.

—"A 'fast' man undertook to tease a clergyman, and asked him, 'Was it a male or a female calf that was killed for the prodigal son?' 'A female,' promptly replied the divine. 'How do you know that?' 'Because,'—looking the interrogator steadily in the face—"I see that the male is alive now."—Exchange.

—When the Shah left England he said to the Prince of Wales: "It is a great pity that Persia is so far from England, otherwise I could come and see you more frequently." "Yes," replied Wales, "but there is some consolation in the fact that the less frequent your visits are the more they are appreciated."—Texas Siftings.

The Origin of the Sash.

The broad sash which the young man of the period now wears is of Spanish and Mexican origin, and, as worn by the greaser dupe of the Rio Grande, is a broad scarf tied at the side with flowing ends. Since they have become fashionable with the American youth the tying in some instances is dispensed with, and the sash, which presents a broad front, is a delusion and a snare, and, like the butterfly necktie, is made up and finishes in the back, where it is concealed by the coat, in a small belt and buckle to keep it on. For the young man whose shape does not allow of his getting along without the use of suspenders, the sash is not "a thing of beauty or a joy forever." If he ties his sash tight enough to keep his trousers in place it will collapse and be like a limp string in size, and if he allows its broad folds to encircle his abdomen loosely then he is in mortal fear that his trousers will drop off, so he is never entirely happy. I saw one real sweet young man the other day, and he had his sash arranged with a sort of martingale. The sash was very broad, and he had his four-in-hand necktie come down and meet his sash, and pinned to it with a society pin. I wouldn't be surprised if the sash was also pinned to his trousers, so that the whole weight was brought on his neck, for he walked with a sort of round-shouldered gait, and didn't look as if he was enjoying himself a bit.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

She Had the Advantage.

Penelope Peachblow—How do you do, Mrs. Plantaganet.

Mrs. Plantaganet—You must excuse me, but I do not think we have ever met.

Penelope Peachblow—Yes; last week at Mrs. Westerley's.

Mrs. Plantaganet (with increasing coolness)—You have the advantage of me.

Penelope Peachblow—I think I have, Mrs. Plantaganet, in eyesight, memory and manners. Good afternoon.—Life.

Equal to an Emergency.

A clergyman, consoling a young widow on the death of her husband, remarked that she could not find his equal.

"I know I can't," replied the sobbing fair one. "But," she added with a heavenly smile, "I mean to try."—Pick-Me-Up.
